FOUR of us went to Prescott Wednesday and attended the Rotary club luncheon. Prescott, like Hope and Washington and many another town, is thinking about Arkansas' Centennial and wondering how the home community can turn that event to account without any tax support.

Ramsey Purchases Acreage Near Oil Test South Hope

Additional Capital Being Put Into Development of This Area

INTEREST IS GROWING

Fitzwater Hopes to Bring in Producer on Lafayette Land

W. E. Ramsey of the Ramsey Oil corporation of Oklahoma City has bought a spread of acreage surrounding the M. D. K. Fitzwater No. 1 Lafayette, in 17-14-24, nine miles south of Hope, where interest is centering on a prospective new Arkansas production area.

Entry of the Ramsey organization in this field is expected to be the incentive for much additional capital being put into development of the area.

Casing has been set at 1,886 feet and the rig shut down pending the setting of a battery of 250-barrel tanks which will be done during the next week, it was announced by Fitzwater.

Geological reports on the field indicate there is a prospect for heavy production for shallow wells with probably sufficient gas pressure to induce natural flow.

Reports on the area by geological experts from Shreveport and other points are highly favorable. Ramsey has opened an office in the Barlow hotel.

Fitzwater is blocking additional acreage south of his present location where he holds leases on approximately 3,500 acres adjoining the 200-acre drilling block.

Other oil concerns interested in the Fitzwater test are F. W. Martin & Co., of Oklahoma City, the Gates concern of Oklahoma, Wooten of Louisiana, Johnny Moore and others.

A test will be made within the next few days, it was announced by Fitzwater.

Borah Stump Tour Fateful for Him

Will Prove Whether Idahoan Is Still Strong Orator at 71

By BYRON PRICE

Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington

Senator Borah's embarkation on an active speaking campaign holds far more than a casual interest for Republicans of all shades of opinion.

Two questions about Mr. Borah have been asked repeatedly. First, is he really in earnest, and ready to throw his best efforts into his presidential campaign? Second, does he still retain at almost 71 these great powers of persuasive eloquence which made him famous?

These questions have not arisen

$114.51 Raised on Second Report for County Red Cross

Donations Coming in Good, D. B. Thompson, Chairman Reports

COUNTY QUOTA $250

Business Area and Industrial Plants to Be Canvassed for Funds

The second tabulation of Red Cross funds donated here to aid flood refugees in a dozen Eastern states Wednesday totaled $114.51.

The report was made by D. B. Thompson, Hempstead county chairman.

Mr. Thompson announced Wednesday that he had received a message from the St. Louis office of the Red Cross, raising the quota from $165 to $250 in Hempstead county.

Mr. Thompson said that he would canvass the business area and industrial plants of Hope for funds to meet this request.

Hope Is Selected for Medical Meet

District Meeting at Prescott Addressed by St. Louis Physicians

Selection of Hope as the site for the next annual meeting place, the Sixth Council district of the Arkansas Medical Society concluded a one-day session held Tuesday at Hotel Allen in Prescott.

Physicians from eight southwestern counties attended the meeting, including Drs. J. H. Weaver, P. B. Carrigan, G. E. Cannon and Dr. Kinsworthy of Hope.

The meeting at Prescott was addressed by four St. Louis physicians. The program:

The Importance of Symptoms in Pelvic Disorders—Dr. G. G. Royston. Obscure Abdominal Pain and Importance of Urinary Tract Investigation—Dr. J. Hoy Sanford. The Neoclassical Segment—Dr. Jos W. Larimore.

The Early Diagnosis of Brain Tumors—Dr. Ernest Sachs.

Reduction of CCC Camps Is Canceled

Rolls May Be Shrunk, But Camp Sites Are to Be Retained

LITTLE ROCK.—The announcement by President Roosevelt that existing CCC camps will be retained another six months, except where present work is completed sooner, may result in Arkansas losing the CCC camp now situated at state park officials Tuesday.

But orders were received at CCC headquarters here Tuesday from Seventh Corps Area headquarters in Omaha, Neb., revoking all previous instructions relating to the abandonment of CCC camps in Arkansas. A message from Omaha said that further orders would be issued soon.

Officials were of the opinion that virtually all the present camps would be maintained, as the forestry and soil conservation services still can use CCC enrollees to good advantage. They said that a call for new enrollment probably would be issued about March 31, and that youths now in CCC would be permitted to re-enlist.

It was believed, however, that the present strength of companies probably would be reduced. Companies now consist of about 250 men, and while it is expected that 164 enrollees probably will comprise a full-strength company after March 31.

Offer Reward for Toll Bridge Robber

Texarkana Man Believed Implicated in Crime, Bearden Says

A $50 reward was offered here Wednesday by Sheriff Jim Bearden for the arrest or for information leading to the arrest of an unidentified bandit, who Friday night hi-jacked the Fulton toll bridge of $30 and kidnapped two persons, who later were released unharmed.

The sheriff said Wednesday that he had reason to believe that the robbery and subsequent kidnapping was committed by a Texarkana man. He would not comment further.

The trail of the suspected robber was lost several miles south of Fulton where an unidentified man accosted H. H. McNall, farmer, and asked to be driven "back to Texarkana—that he didn't want to cross the toll bridge at Fulton."

County-Wide Sing City Hall Sunday

Program Will Start at 2 p. m., Continuing for Two Hours

A county-wide singing will be held at 2 p. m. Sunday at Hope city hall, it was announced Wednesday by Clifford Franks of Hope.

Several quartets are scheduled for appearances on the program. The public is invited to attend.

Starting at 2 p. m., the program will continue for two hours or more, Mr. Franks said.

U. S. Labor Act Is Barred by Court

Bendix Corporation Wins First Round in Federal Hearing

CHICAGO.—(AP)—Federal Judge John P. Barnes termed the National Labor Relations Act unconstitutional Tuesday and said he would grant an injunction against the National Labor Relations Board in favor of the Bendix Products Corporation, South Bend, Ind.

The corporation had asked the order to enjoin the board from holding an election among its employees to determine whether Local No. 1 of the International Automobile Workers or the Bendix Employees Association would represent the employees in collective bargaining.

The judge's written opinion said: "The combination of majority rule and compulsory unilateral arbitration is the heart of the act. Take those out and the act is gone. Consequently, it is concluded that the whole act is unconstitutional and void."

Naval Limitation Power Is Placed With America and British

LONDON, Eng.—(Copyright Associated Press)—The United States, Great Britain and France signed a new international naval treaty Wednesday.

The pact removes restrictions on the size of navies, but the United States and Great Britain, possessors of the world's mightiest fleets, agreed separately to maintain their navies at the same level.

Excellent Talent in Ouachita Show Here Friday Night

Among Them Is Dick Powell's Ouachita Beauty Selection

YBMA IS SPONSOR

Proceeds Will Go to Highway Tree-Planting Program Here

Ouachita will present a group of its most colorful students when the curtain rises on the musical and minstrel show at Hope city hall Friday night.

Among the featured members are: Miss Ruth Lawrence of Little Rock, who was recently selected by Dick Powell as Ouachita's most beautiful girl who will sing a solo, "Moon Over Miami"; Miss Ruth Babbs, also from Little Rock, a beautiful blonde, who will act the part of "Alice," when the favorite old song, "Alice Blue Gown," is sung by a well-balanced chorus; Bob Utley, of Nashville, a member of the chorus, who was voted Ouachita's most handsome boy this year; and a trio of girls from Texarkana, the Misses Mildred Powers, Jeannette Lavender, and Teenie Lavender, who will sing popular and classical selections.

This trio has been presented to audiences in several of the Southern states.

Hope will also be represented in the cast. Miss Inez Taylor is a member of the girls' chorus, and Miss Fern Garner is an assistant behind the scenes.

This show has been received enthusiastically in Arkadelphia to a packed house, and comes to Hope with the reputation of being the show hit of the season. Conway will entertain the group on Thursday night.

A general admission of 25 cents will be charged to all, young and old alike, and the proceeds above expenses will go to the tree planting fund, as a contribution from the Young Business Men's association.

French Undecided About Rhineland

Hitler Refuses to Get Out —Germany Breaks With Russia

PARIS, France.—(AP)—The French government was described Wednesday as wavering between two desires—to take economic sanctions against Germany, and to retain Great Britain's military aid.

Since Great Britain, France and Belgium have agreed to act in "common accord," France officials said "the next step depends upon our allies."

Russo-German Break

BERLIN, Germany.—(AP)—Trade negotiations between Germany and Soviet Russia have come to a halt, both German and Russian official sources said Wednesday.

The break followed Hitler's March 7th Reichstag speech announcing occupation of the Rhineland and denunciation of the Locarno treaty.

Dardanelles, Issue

ANKARA, Turkey.—(AP)—Turkish newspapers are asking the government to renege on the Dardanelles, but high officials said Wednesday that the government is unwilling to complicate the precarious international situation further by breaking the Locarno treaty.

Won't Leave Rhineland

LONDON.—(AP)—Europe's crisis was thrown into a new and more complicated muddle Tuesday night when Adolf Hitler refused to take his troops out of the Rhineland and rejected the Hague court as a tribunal.

Der Fuehrer's answer to the Locarno program, made public a few hours after the Council of the League of Nations suddenly adjourned, left the Rhineland dispute unsettled and with a long drawn out stalemate in prospect.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's special ambassador, arrived in London with a personal message to the British government from the German dictator just as the council broke up, an action which was interpreted in informed circles as a direct rebuff to Hitler for his long delay in answering the Locarno proposals.

Although the Locarno demands were rejected, the Reich said that on March 31—two days after the German Reichstag election—it would "place at the disposal of the royal British government a comprehensive statement of its position, together with its positive proposals."

The council will reconvene in Geneva later.

Ohio River Reaches Peak of 59.6 Feet

To Hold There 24 Hours —Will Be Within Its Banks Saturday

By the Associated Press

Heavy rains on the upper watersheds of the Ohio river and its Pennsylvania tributaries brought threats of new floods to western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio Wednesday.

River observers along the lower basin of the Mississippi river agreed that flood threats in that area are "still in the skies."

A reckoning of the death lists for the nation Wednesday brought the total to 127.

River at Crest

CINCINNATI, Ohio.—(Copyright Associated Press)—The Ohio river, far out of its banks with water from the disastrous Pittsburgh-Wheeling flood, reached a crest of 59.6 feet Wednesday as the flooded tributaries added to its burden.

Meteorologist W. C. Devereaux predicted the river would hold around the 59-foot stage for 24 hours and then drop slowly until it settled within its banks about Saturday.

How to Preserve Eggs Is Described

Solution of "Water Glass" Makes Satisfactory Preservative

Eggs can be preserved in water glass during the surplus season and used for cooking purposes later on when they are scarce, according to Miss Helen Griffin, home demonstration agent.

Directions for preserving eggs by this method are given by G. W. Knox Jr., extension poultryman, University of Arkansas college of Agriculture. Only clean, fresh, infertile eggs, should be put down in water glass. Cracked eggs cannot be used.

Clean and scald a 5-gallon crock. Heat a quantity of water to the boiling point and allow it to cool. Mix one part of water glass and 9 parts of boiled water which has been allowed to cool. Put this solution in the crock and place the eggs in it as they are available, keeping at least 2 inches of the solution above the eggs.

The crock should be covered to prevent evaporation, and stored in a cool place, Mr. Knox adds.

Swedish Cities Cut Taxes

STOCKHOLM.—(AP)—Nearly all Swedish cities have announced reductions in taxes for 1936, in some cases amounting to 13 per cent. Ten communities will keep their 1935 rates, while only four similar cities have increased their taxes.

Calls for Ruling From Atty. Bailey on Thorn's Order

Governor Challenges Commutation of Negro Andrew Hefley

SCHEDULED TO DIE

Nothing to Be Done About Charley Vardemann's Clemency

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Governor Futrell raised two additional points Wednesday which may have a bearing on whether Andrew Hefley, negro, will die in the electric chair April 3 or start serving sentence under a commutation order granted by Acting Governor Harvey Thorn.

Writing to Attorney General Bailey, Governor Futrell asked if the commutation order became effective when it was signed by Thorn or when it was filed with the secretary of state.

The governor also said: "It appears that no notice of law to apply for this commutation was given as is required by law."

Governor's Letter

LITTLE ROCK.—Governor Futrell disclosed also that in the case of Charley Vardemann, to whom Thorn granted clemency making him eligible for parole, which can't now be challenged, the governor wrote Speaker Thorn a letter.

The letter, written four days after receipt of the prosecuting attorney's report on the Vardemann case, follows:

"The statement of facts contained in the letter of the prosecuting attorney to me of March 7, convinces me that no clemency should be granted at this time.

"An argument over Wright's daughter came up that persisted and grew bitter thereafter, which resulted in Wright's death and leaving. On the day he was killed, he came back to get his personal effects to move away, and was out in the yard in the act of leaving the premises when Vardemann fired the fatal shot in the back near the right shoulder. There is no claim that Wright was armed, or that Vardemann was in any danger. He was just ferociously mad.

"The jury recommends that an indefinite furlough be granted. I know the disposition of people to yield to entreaties when they are not personally concerned. They deliberately said this man should suffer life and according to the statement of the prosecuting attorney a part of the jury was for sending him to the chair.

"If I should pardon Vardemann under the circumstances in this case, there is not a man in the penitentiary I know of that should not be pardoned. In fact, I never could justify my action in this case, or in any other case thereafter in which a refusal might be made. My conviction is that I would violate my duty if I were to grant this request. I can't do it.

"There is no good reason for keeping him there during his natural life. In other words, a man who should be kept there his natural life should be electrocuted in the first instance. People should be taught that it is not such an easy matter to kill a person and get out of it."

Was So Angry, He Forgot His Wife

Doctor Has Uncomfortable Time on Lonohe Witness Stand

LONOKE, Ark.—Dr. W. C. Green of Little Rock hardly will be able to deny that he was a trifle upset when he finished his stay on the witness stand in Circuit Court here Tuesday.

The doctor was a defense witness in the trial of Fred Rappich Jr., former star student of Lonohe High School, who was accused of burglary.

At a cross-examination, Prosecuting Attorney George Hartje sailed into the doctor and the two "went around and around."

When the question was finished the doctor stamped out of the courtroom, out of the building and into his car. He gave the starter a kick and away he dashed.

Apparently he forgot that Mrs. Green had accompanied him here and was depending on him for transportation back to Little Rock.

To add to the excitement, Mrs. Green went out to look for the car, found it missing and reported it stolen to Sheriff Troy Carroll.

That misunderstanding was cleared up, however, by a stander-by who had recognized Dr. Green as he drove off.

The bulky spring air apparently cooled off Dr. Green and, soon looking a trifle sheepish, he returned for his better nine-tenths.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygieia, the Health Magazine

The standard American diet of many years ago was bread, meat, sugar, and potatoes. Such a diet is by no means efficient, since it fails to include many of the essentials about which I have written so much in this series of articles.

Although bread has been called the staff of life, it is far from being an ideal food. Indeed, some bread is a poor food except when eaten in conjunction with other foods. Very few people subsist on bread alone.

White bread contains too few or too poor proteins. Whole grain bread contains roughage and more vitamins than white bread, but still is short of being a complete food.

Addition of milk to bread serves to raise the latter's content of calcium and of important vitamins.

Remember that bread means different things in different places. There are the scones of Scotland, the long loaf of France, the twist of Poland, and the American bread, untouched by human hands.

Modern American bread is made by machine. It has an established composition. It is a sensible food. It is rich in carbohydrates and proteins. It provides mineral salts, fats, and some vitamins.

The committee on Foods of the American Medical Association has approved the following statement on bread:

"1. Bread is our outstanding source of the largest single need in the balanced diet—food energy.
"2. Bread is a most economical source of food energy—there is almost no waste in white bread, as it is 96 per cent digested.
"3. Bread is often incorrectly called a 'fattening food.' The fact that bread is high in food energy does not mean that it in itself will produce overweight. Control of weight depends solely on the food energy content of the diet as a whole, not on any specific food in the diet. Bread can be eaten even by those who are reducing under their physician's instructions.
"4. Bread is a completely wholesome food."

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

If you have an office job, routine not only sets your attitude toward work but it also sets your features into a sort of peculiar mask that goes with responsibility and accuracy. The same is true of teaching. In fact the busier the person the more likely the features to cover the machinery of the mind grinding behind them.

One exception is the case of the person who takes responsibility hard, or whose work conflicts with his temperament. Then the lines of worry cannot be concealed and in time are apparent to everybody.

It does not take long for the spontaneous face of youth to adopt either one or the other of these patterns. And it is too bad.

Also True at Home

Now let us move to the home, almost any home. Here, the mother, one would think, has enough variety to prevent either type of countenance from becoming chronic. But if her daily program is inspected a minute, the responsibility of routine work, responsibility of health and behavior and all the rest of it, variety does not change but only increases her burden.

She may be of the mobile kind who takes responsibility easily and does not cross unnecessary bridges; and in that case will find time to sing and smile sometimes. But this hearty happy mother, it seems to me, is getting rarer every day. Many mothers, instead of noting, present what I choose to call "the household face."

I don't believe it can be helped, life being what it is today with its complications and worries. But I sigh for the times when the woman with her brood not only was "motherly" but looked it.

Today we have better mothers than ever, I believe, but I also believe in the tendency to a feeling of over-responsibility. And as time goes on, unless we do something about it, girls won't look at motherhood as an enviable state at all. Indeed many are questioning it now.

Misdirected Interest

The answer, at least to part of it, is that parents are so anxious to do right by their children that they are missing the most important of all—to enjoy the children; to have fun with them; to be able to stand the sight of a dirty face and a muddy shoe; to take little misadventures as they come without digging into the medicine chest of behaviorism for an eternal remedy.

The home has become largely an office-job and teaching job put together. Children are always more amenable to discipline under the cheerful tutor than under the worried, faded or frozen-faced dictator. They do better by working "with" us than "for" us. A bit of chumminess and a sense of humor coats the pill so nicely. And to mention expression again, like a whistle or a song it reacts directly on feelings. The "smiler" gets his reward in lighter spirits. I don't know why it is so, but it is so.

TOBY RYAN, 19, works behind the jewelry counter of a large department store. She poses for a photograph to be used in a store advertisement and MARY HART, the photographer, tells her she has a "camera face."

"Toby goes to dinner with BILL, HARRY who works in an advertising agency. A few days later Toby loses her job. Heart and he sends her to DON HILKAT who runs a model agency. Hilka tells her she must have photographs in order to register as a model and arranges for her to take them.

"Toby's efforts to find another job are fruitless. Then she meets MARY HILKAT who runs a model agency. Hilka tells her she must have photographs in order to register as a model and arranges for her to take them.

"After several anxious days the model agency reports to Toby that they have an assignment for her. HARRY HILKAT, another model, loans Toby a dress.

"Toby works at several other jobs. In one week she earns three times her salary at the store.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII

It was one of those deceptive March days when brilliant sun shine and a clear blue sky call the unsuspecting out of doors—to face, not balmy breezes but a snapping, wintry wind.

Toby Ryan walked briskly, clinging to the narrow brim of her hat, which looked as though, at any moment, it might dance away. Toby had been calling at studios, making the rounds as new models are advised to do in the hope of future calls for work. The last call had taken longer than she had expected and now Toby was in a hurry. In 20 minutes she was due at a studio on lower Madison.

She reached the intersection, saw a bus on the opposite side of the street, headed down town. Toby ran for it, climbed on board just as the doors were about to bang shut.

She dropped her fare into the coin box and slipped into the nearest seat with a sigh of relief.

The pictures Toby was to pose for were for a company that made hats—not expensive, one-of-a-kind hats to be sold in exclusive shops, but the sort displayed in department stores with $3.49 and $1.98 price tags. It wasn't likely it would take more than an hour or so.

A voice at her elbow interrupted. "As I live and breathe! It's the girl with the blue eyes."

Toby turned. It was a moment—a long moment—before she recognized the young man beside her. His top coat was rough tweed and his hat was a gray felt. Toby said, "Knowing very well that she should not have said it, 'Oh—hello.'"

"You don't know what a shock this is," the young man went on. "Meeting you again. Just like this. Why, I've looked everywhere for you—actually everywhere—"

Toby said, "You're the man who bought the rhinestone clips, aren't you? Fifty-nine dollars' worth."

"Yes. And I'm the man you bumped into on the street corner one morning about a week ago. Remember?"

Toby's eyes told him she did. "By George!" he went on. "You're even prettier than I thought you were."

It was the wrong thing to say and he recognized this almost instantly. He said, "Oh, please don't be offended. I only said that because it's true. You're prettier than any other girl I've ever seen. Why shouldn't I say it when it's true?"

Toby's eyes told him she did. "By George!" he went on. "You're even prettier than I thought you were."

something he did not hear clearly, she pushed her way toward the door. A moment later the bus halted and she stepped down to the street.

On the sidewalk she turned—and raised startled eyes. The young man was beside her.

"Why—?" Toby began.

He said, grinning, "You don't think I'm going to risk losing you again, do you? Not a chance! Remember, we were going to have dinner together. I waited an hour for you that night. Now, listen, why don't you forget whatever it is you were going to do this afternoon and come along with me? We'll go over to Tony's—"

There was something about him that made it hard to refuse. "But I can't," Toby said.

"Oh, but of course you can. And, what's more, you're going to. I'll tell you what we'll do—"

Toby shook her head. "No," she said. "I—really I can't. And I've got to go now. I'll be late if I don't."

"Then when can I see you? Will you meet me for dinner?"

She said, smiling a little because it was all so ridiculous, "You've forgotten that I don't know you. Why, I don't even know your name—"

"My name," the young man said, "is Timothy Jamieson. And you wrote it when you made out the charge for those clips—or whatever you call the things. I was hoping you'd remember."

Toby did remember, then. She asked, because she really was curious, "What in the world did you do with all those clips?"

"Really want to know?"

"I really do."

"Well, it's a long story but if you'll meet me for dinner—"

Toby saw a clock on the building across the street. The hands pointed to 4:25. Without waiting to hear more, she exclaimed, "Oh, I've got to hurry!" and fled.

SHE was breathless when she opened the door of the tenth floor studio. A woman in a green smock came forward and said, "Miss Ryan?"

"Yes. I hope I'm not late—"

The woman glanced at a wrist watch. "No," she said, "by no time you're a few minutes early. The photographer is busy with another model, but you can go in the dressing room and get ready. You'll find the hats you're to wear on the table."

Toby went into the dressing room. Thank fortune, that clock on the street had been fast! It was an hour and a half later when she emerged from the building. Dusk had fallen and shop windows were lighted. Ahead, street lights glowed in the semi-darkness. Toby stood at the entrance for a moment, looking to left and right.

But there was no young man in a tweed topcoat and jaunty gray felt hat anywhere in sight. Toby hadn't really expected that there would be. She just wanted to be sure. He'd said that he did wait, that other time—

"That," Toby promptly assured herself, was nonsense. Since when had she taken to believing the "lines" of fresh young men, trying to pick up dates? He was a fresh young man. What else could you call him—coming to the store the way he had, asking her to have dinner with him when they hadn't even been introduced? And he must have thought she was the sort of girl who would accept such an invitation or he wouldn't have asked her. The idea of believing, even for a minute, that he was different from any of the other fresh young men! He wasn't different; he was exactly like the rest.

No, she'd never see Mr. Timothy Jamieson (if that really was his name) again. Hurrying toward the avenue, she told herself she didn't even want to see him.

It was Wednesday, the night she usually had dinner with Bill Brandt, and she met him at their favorite cafeteria. The little table they favored, in a corner shadowed by the balcony, was vacant.

Toby set a plate of chicken and noodles and another of perfection salad on the red-and-white checked table cloth, discarded the tray and looked across at Bill.

She said, "I think I'm going to have a chance to pose for some really important pictures next week! I was in Tone & Raleigh's studio this afternoon and they practically promised me—"

She went on, relating the day's adventures—except, of course, the encounter with the young man on the bus.

SHE didn't notice as she talked, important names rolling glibly from her tongue, guffing figures that would have seemed enormous a few weeks ago, that Bill had little to say. Once she asked, "What are you working on now, Bill? Anything new?"

"Same old chores," he told her. "Toby didn't ask questions. She remembered something another girl who modeled had told her, launched into the narrative.

They finished the evening with a movie. It was a picture starring Norma Shearer, and Toby, intent on the screen drama, could not forget that the glamorous heroine once had stood, even as Toby Ryan, before the cameras of commercial photographers. Of course Toby wasn't dreaming of a Hollywood career. Nothing like that. Still it was exciting!

They took the subway home. Toby didn't need to rise early the next morning, but she knew that Bill did. The light from a street lamp shone down on them as they stood before her rooming house. Toby suddenly noticed Bill's coat. It wasn't an expensive tweed, nor was it cut on smart lines. It was just an ordinary, two-year-old coat. Bill looked—well, a bit shabby. She'd never thought about it before.

She said goodnight then. She looked over her shoulder from the top step, smiling as she usually did, but it wasn't Bill she was thinking of. She was thinking of a young man with brown eyes beneath a jaunty gray felt—a young man she was never going to see again.

Toby turned her key in the lock and went inside. From the open door at the end of the hall the rooming house keeper's voice called, "That you, Miss Ryan?"

"Yes, Mrs. Moeller."

The woman appeared in the door. "There's a message for you. Came just a little while ago."

Toby said, "Why, how in the world—!" and reached for the slip of paper.

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD—Nothing seems to be quite so inconsistent as the Hollywood matrimonial situation.

Some people marry in haste and repent at leisure. Dorothy Lee isn't allowing any more widowers to grow under her feet, though. At 25, she has just acquired a fourth husband. On the other hand, there's the mature deliberation of Patricia Overman and Jerry Meacham, whose wedding has just culminated the only formal three-year engagement of which the film colony has ever heard.

Somewhat different are the impending nuptials of Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard, who, though not admittedly betrothed, have been inseparable companions for four years. Such a case is a little puzzling, as in the case of Douglas Fairbanks. Nobody knows what he's been concealing his intent to marry Lady Ashley and thereby allowing the loose-tongues to re-link his name with Mary Pickford.

Distinction.

Young, matinee-idolish Robert Taylor told me that he'd engaged, but that if he were actually to marry he'd keep it a secret. Which seems to be a bit of pretty fine discrimination in regard to opinion.

And it raises a couple of questions: Do fans care whether a star is married; and, if they did care, would they be more resentful when they found out they'd been deceived?

Exception.

A hallyhoo marriage is likely to turn out as successfully as any. When Rod LaRoque was a top-notch star and Vilma Banky was an unknown from Hungary, they fell in love. Both were under contract to Samuel Goldwyn, and he recognized a chance for a great publicity stunt.

The wedding was heralded six weeks in advance by an expenditure of something like $30,000.

Most of Hollywood attended the super-spectacle and Goldwyn himself gave away the bride.

That marriage is doing very well indeed. The LaRocques celebrated their tenth anniversary the other day.

The Champ

Unless something happens to the Gloria Swanson-Herbert Marshall romance, she's likely to be the most-married actress Marshall would be No. 5. Josephine Dunn took a fourth husband last year. Jean Harlow and Lina Basquette have been married three times.

Bela Lugosi and Eddie Sutherland are the most married men. Tied at 4-4. James F. Lewis has been married twice to Hester Deane. And Ian Keith twice took vows with the Baroness Fern Andra, former foreign star. But she divorced him a second time and walked to jail along with Torchy Peden, the bicycle rider.

Childhood Mates

Oddest Hollywood union is that of Carl Brisson, the Danish actor, and Cleo Jorgenson. They were born next door to each other in Copenhagen, sometimes slept in the same crib, and played together before they could talk. They were married at 16, and have been happy for 23 years.

Record Holders

Briefest Hollywood marriage: Lona Andre and Edward Norris, she filed for divorce in five days. Paul Ames, the millionaire broker, and June Knight parted after 12 days.

Longest-term marriages: George Barbier and Carrie Thatcher, and Cecil B. DeMille and Constance Adams. You wouldn't remember those ceremonies. They occurred 33 years ago.

A year behind are Fred Stone and Allene Crater. Next, Warner Oland and Edith Sharrin. Tied for fourth place are J. Gleason and Lucille Webster, and Helen Broderick and Lester Crawford.

The Jean Herscholt have been married 22 years; the Joe E. Browns, 20; the Roscoe Karns, 19; the Robert Woolseys, 18; the Leslie Howards and Warner Buxters, 18.

Center Point

Miss Florence Putnam has been absent from school several days with flu.

The Rev. Mr. Reece filled his appointments at this place Saturday night and Sunday. He has promised to come back in April. We hope there will be a larger attendance next time.

Alonso Jones spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Mullins and attended church here.

Mrs. J. W. Galloway spent Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. W. W. Wright. Miss Ruby Hubbard is on the sick list. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

A few from this community attended the fiddler's contest at Patmos Saturday night.

Miss Delilah Galloway spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Galloway.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tomlin and children spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wright. The children attended church here.

Mrs. J. W. Galloway and daughter, Gladys spent Sunday with relatives in Bodewas.

Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Mullins and Alonso Wise spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Bonnie Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Ferguson had as Saturday night guests, their daughter, Mrs. Downs and children of near Oakland and Rev. Treece of near Fulton.

John Ridgill was out in this community Sunday morning.

Shover Springs

This community was blessed with a good rain Monday night. Plenty of wind and hail accompanied it.

Mr. and Mrs. U. Garrett called on J. W. McWilliams Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. John Read, Mr. and Mrs. Romig and children of Prescott motored to Minden, La., Sunday and spent the day with Mark Read and family.

Mr. and Mrs. George Crews had Sunday dinner with Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Collier.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Walker were dinner guests of Mrs. C. B. Rogers Sunday.

Earlie McWilliams and sons Glendon and Kenneth spent Sunday night with his father, J. W. McWilliams.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Phillips, S. Dudley and Earlie McWilliams visited the experiment farm Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Woodard Wiggings of that place.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Collier were visitors at the experiment farm Friday.

Mrs. O. J. Phillips called on Mrs. Earlie McWilliams last Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Robertson are welcome neighbors in our community. They are old friends and we are glad to have them back.

Mrs. H. C. Collier entertained with a quilting at her home Monday afternoon. The quilt was one of the 22 pieces in the H. D. C. last year. Delicious cake was served with peaches.

The Soil Erosion people are doing some wonderful work in this community.

Chicago to Make Lagoon a Highway

Sunken Road Will Provide New Speedway for Motor Traffic

CHICAGO.—(AP)—A highway "low-way" is offered as a solution to Chicago's traffic problem.

It entails the draining of a Lincoln park lagoon and the building of a high speed roadway on its soggy bed. Engineers say it is the most practical suggestion yet made to unsnarl traffic.

The lagoon, which resembles a canal, parallels the outer drive along the lake shore, north of the loop business area, for two miles.

Drives Congested
The outer drive is scarcely able to take care of rush hour traffic now, and with completion of a new bridge across the head of the Chicago river, traffic from several sources will converge in the park.

The only other roads through the park that might be utilized are what Otto K. Jelinek, traffic engineer for the Chicago park district calls "horse and buggy" drives of the twisting variety, beautiful but not practical.

Jelinek and other engineers figure the proposed submerged highway could be made into a thing of beauty—for $4,500,000. They would erect arched over-passes of the Venetian type for pedestrians, and would landscape the sloping sides.

Beauty in the Highway
They argue that the lagoon isn't used much any more anyway, and that it would be just as beautiful as a sunken highway as a stagnant pool.

Jelinek would make the lagoon a three-way drive—two one-way sections for high speed traffic, and a third for motorists in no hurry. The

Pierrette Speaks

By Helen Welshimer

WHY do I think of you at night,
When there is dusk, and stars for light?
Why do I gaze across the wall,
Remembering you were brave and tall,
And that you danced across the floor,
And ran away, a troubadour,
Who went to sing to other eyes
Your roving tales of gypsy skies?

I SAID: "I will not think again,
The world is filled with braver men.
So let him go where'er he wist,
I shall not keep a lonely tryst."
Now you go singing down the way
Such haunting songs from yesterday.
(I mix your favorite cakes for tea,
Wondering, will you come to me?)

I'D patch the soles your journey wore,
Mend the garments thorn-trees tore,
Buy the balm your wounds would need,
Where fickle loves had made you bleed.
Oh, when you take the long road home,
Too tired to love and dream and roam,
If you will turn in at my gate,
I shall not ask why you are late.

I think the forest fire protection we have is a mighty fine thing, but I think the forestry officials should try to gain the co-operation of the farmers and not try to tell them what they got to do, or not to do. Some of our farmers here don't like for a state ranger or someone else to come out here and ask them who gave them the authority to burn off their own new ground. I think it is right for us to notify our nearest tower, or CCC camp, and I will state here for the benefit of some that you can get in contact with the tower by calling Mr. Honea at Rosston.

Legs Coming Back, Hollywood Hears

Movies Rebounding From Heavy Clothes of the Costume Drama

By ROBBIN COONS
Associated Press Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD—Legs — whisper it softly—are coming back.

Marlene Dietrich, whose shapely calves are almost as well known as her famous face, has announced she is leaving for London, but there still will be legs in Hollywood.

In pictures, too, Legs, in musical pictures, never were tabu.

When Clara Bow recently, surveying her abandoned film career, complained that no film of hers was complete without her "strip act," she spoke the truth. There had to be at least one scene of Clara "en chemise."

That sort of thing went out with the production code, in most instances. There has to be a good reason, nowadays, for filming an actress in anything but conventional attire. None but the strongest dramatic reason will suffice.

Even when a state of undress is dramatically necessary, the "proper" state of undress is well high mathematically decreed.

Leg Art Never Died
But legs? Even when Hollywood rushed back to costume pictures for safety in the censor stampede, you never heard mention of a "limb" or a "nether appendage." Leg art—which is the exploitation department's name for a favorite photographic art—was still leg art.

Even if the censors didn't like it, scarcely a Hollywood beauty could be snapped at sport without producing a masterpiece. Shorts for tennis, badminton, golfing, archery and other outdoor recreations are an accepted fashion.

In pictures, costumes uncover a multitude of legs just as other costumes swathe the feminine form in yards and bolts of heavy velvets and brocades.

The star who plays the chorus girl who makes good must look like a chorus girl, and chorus girls, beyond all doubt, have legs.

If the star plays in backstage musicals, there will be at least one and maybe more sequences in which the fact that she is well supported on her own becomes beautifully apparent.

In "San Francisco," in which Jean netie MacDonald's singing is featured, the slim and stately red-haired star wears one costume which, although the period is 1900, might have come from a Busby Berkeley chorus of today. At the time, doubtless, it was quite startling.

Hollywood's attitude toward legs is best summed up in the philosophy of a studio painter who was wrestling up a set despite obstacles. He was painting on a stage white scores of chorus beauties, in scanty velveteen costumes, were practicing. He worked steadily, placidly dodging flying kicking, tapping feet.

Asked what he thought of his job, the man grinned:

"A leg," he said tersely, "is just something to paint around."

Ed Moriarty, a New Slugger, Lifts Hopes of Boston Bees

Boston Nationals Figure They Have Chance to Land
in at Least Fifth Place This Year

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another article in the series on big league training camps.

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Perhaps the most interesting member of the Boston Bees is Edward Joseph Moriarty.

After creating a mild sensation in his bow with the old Braves last June, Moriarty quit after 10 days, intent on studying for the priesthood. He went to Montreal to make arrangements to enter the seminary, but changed his mind and spent the remainder of the summer as a playground instructor in Holyoke, which is his home.

Here he is at the Waterfront Park—a problem child. The question is what to do with him, for after you discuss batting there isn't too much that can be said about Edward Joseph in a baseball way.

On his showing against professional competition to date, Moriarty, a 5-foot 10½-inch 180-pounder with the force of a Jim Jeffries, looks like one of the greatest natural hitters ever to break into the game.

A player with his power has to be pretty bad in the field to be kept out of the lineup, and he now is being given a whirl in right field.

Moriarty is a product of Holy Cross, which gave professional baseball a long list of stalwarts, from Andy Conkle and Bill Carrigan on down the line. He just missed a .500 average in four years of the college game. When the Boston Red Sox visited Worcester for an exhibition game with Holy Cross last April, Eddie nicked Bob Groves for the longest home run ever made off that renowned southpaw.

Hits a Long Ball

Moriarty made his debut with the Braves in a doubleheader against the Chicago Cubs. He made seven hits in the two contests, including a home run and a pair of doubles. The young Irishman compiled an average of .324 in his brief whirl with the Braves.

Moriarty was the captain and second baseman of the Holy Cross varsity, but is too slow to play second. He also has trouble in going back for a ball, but Manager Bill McKeechne hopes to polish his fielding sufficiently to keep him in right. Quinn and McKeechne trust this is to be one of them—his last was in 1933.

The sharp eyes of Moriarty, a right-handed hitter and thrower, are deeply set and he has high cheekbones. Indeed, he says that he can see his own cheekbones without the benefit of a looking glass.

Moriarty was graduated from Holy Cross the second highest man in his class. He reads Latin between games and drills, but declares that he definitely has decided upon baseball as a career.

Only the illustrious Hank Gowdy, a coach, remains to bring memories of the glorious drive of the 1914 Braves, since Rabbit Maranville left.

Berger Only Star of Team
Old J. A. Robert Quinn, fronting for the real owner of the outfit, Charles Francis Adams, swapped or shipped a dozen or more athletes in an effort to put the club that collapsed.

ed with Babe Ruth back on its feet. The Braves established a new modern record for games lost by dropping 115 decisions in 1935. They won only 38.

This, however, wasn't the fault of Walter Berger, centerfielder and star of the Bees. Berger led the loop in runs batted in with 130, and in home runs with 34.

Berger will be flanked by Harold Lee in left, and Gene Moore or Moriarty in right. Lee led the Brave regulars in hitting with 309 last season. Moore, a refugee from the St. Louis Cardinal chain gang, is up from Rochester via Brooklyn.

Rupert Thompson and Johnny Tyler, who hit well after being brought in from Harrisburg for the last month of 1935, are other retrievers.

With Fred Frankhouse and Ed Brandt traded to Brooklyn, and Huck Betts gone to St. Paul, pitching is the most serious Bees problem.

McKeechne is banking on Johnny Babich, Ray Bengt, Muscles Cartwell, Boom-Boom, MacFayden, Tiny Jim Chaplin, Sharkey Eiland, and Bob Brown. Chaplin won 24, and Eiland, a lefthander, 21 for a fourth-place Nashville array. Hobart Scott, a husky left-hander, appears to have a fine assortment of stuff, although his record is as poor as that of the Knoxville club for which he toiled.

Lopez Due to Star

The veteran Bob Smith may help out in the spring, and Bobby Reis, the jack-of-all-trades obtained from Brooklyn, believes he can win on the mound.

Hopeful of lending helping hands are John Lanning, who won 15 for the last-place Knoxville brigade; Albert Blanche, a Providence College product; Jim McClosky, a southpaw from Wilkes-Barre; and Gerald Veach, a 19-year-old southpaw from Paducah of the Kitty League.

Al Lopez record indicates that the ex-Brooklyn catcher has one big campaign in three. Quinn and McKeechne trust this is to be one of them—his last was in 1933.

Bill Lewis and Ray Mueller will assist the Castilian.

Anthony Cuccinello, from Brooklyn, will be the only new face in the Bees' infield. Baxter Jordan will look after first base, Bald Billy Urbanski will be the shortstop, with Pinkney Whitney at third, Joe Coscarart and Butch Meyers, an accomplished infielder from Buffalo, will be the extra men.

McKeechne professes to believe that it is an open battle for fifth place with the Dodgers, Phillies, and Reds forming the opposition in his drive for that objective.

The Bees do not appear too formidable either on paper or on the field, but McKeechne has a way of taking mediocre arrays a long way. And there is no Ruth present this trip to interfere with discipline.

Hollywood Blamed for Birth Control

Norwegian Capital Traces Effect to Showing of American Films

OSLO—(AP)—Norway's capital has an "alarming deficit" of 70,000 children, according to the city registrar, and he places the blame squarely on the film companies of Hollywood.

"In lowering the birth-rate," he said, "people do not really save money. They merely use their wages on unpatriotic things instead of supporting national work."

"The population of Oslo spends a million dollars a year for moving pictures, which means that the film companies of Hollywood get that to which Norwegian farmers and food producers have a moral claim."

As a result of the lowering birth-rate, Oslo today has 39,000 children under 15, whereas the normal number should be 109,000.

Wet Weather Is Cycle's Forecast

Flood Danger Due to Heavy Precipitation Since 1934 Drouth

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH
Associated Press Science Writer
WASHINGTON—(AP)—Heavy winter snows, exceptional warm weather, and abnormal rainfall over the eastern seaboard are advanced as reasons for the devastating floods in the east. Officials of the United States weather bureau here say that over a considerable portion of the country abnormally wet weather has prevailed since the great drouth of 1934 was broken in September of that year. Since that time, precipitation has been 125 per cent of normal over the central Mississippi valley and the area from the Allegheny mountains to the Atlantic coast. This situation came to a head when a low-pressure air mass moved northward over the Atlantic seaboard, bringing with it heavy rains generally in the eastern states during the days preceding the floods. May Be Wet Weather Cycle To complicate the situation and bring on the record-breaking floods, abnormally warm weather prevailed over most of the country, with exceptionally high temperatures in the eastern area where mountain snows yielded to the heat and began to pour out the load of moisture accumulated during the winter. Official records showed that temperatures from the Mississippi valley eastward varied from three to 12 degrees above normal during the week before the floods. The abnormally wet conditions led some officials of the weather bureau to speculate privately again over their belief that the drouth of 1934 marked a climax to a 25 year cycle during which the weather had been growing hotter and drier. If that is true, it was said, the country may be coming into a cycle during which the weather will be increasingly colder and wetter for about the same length of time. Officials declined, however, to make any predictions based on such a trend, declaring that their data is still insufficient for such forecasts. Wants Control at Headquarters H. H. Bennett, head of the federal government's soil conservation service, saw in the floods an object lesson for the doctrine his organization has been preaching. The only sound method of controlling floods, he declares, is to prevent them at the headwaters by holding moisture in the soil with adequate cover. He holds that tremendous advances in flood prevention could be made at a cost far less than the damage done by a single catastrophe such as the present one.

There are 615,000,000 acres of forest lands in continental United States, which is about one-third of the land area of the country. When the country was settled, forest land acreage totaled approximately 800,000,000 acres.

Here's Story of a Man and a Horse

Jockey Who Was Aboard When He Fell, Visits Black Gold's Grave

By PAP of the Associated Press
This is a story of a man's love for a horse, a thoroughbred which made turf history. The characters are De Verne Emery, a jockey, and Black Gold, winner of derbies. In the quiet of an afternoon a short time ago Emery walked hock-deep in mud of the infield at the Fair Grounds race track and placed a bouquet of flowers on the grave of Black Gold. It wasn't the first time the jockey had performed this silent tribute to the horse he loved. Alone, unnoticed until this year, the jockey who rode the coal-black thoroughbred in its last race, has made an annual pilgrimage for seven years to the grave of the 1924 Kentucky Derby winner. Ever since the day in 1928 when Black Gold, running as a gelding, buckled, fell and broke the slender foreleg that had carried him to victory in five derbies in a single season, De Verne has visited the grave. As a youngster De Verne had admired Black Gold when R. M. Hoots, the horse's owner, raced him in New Orleans as a maiden. As an apprentice jockey, De Verne idolized Black Gold when he set the son of Black Tony set turf history by galloping to victory in five derbies—the Louisiana at Jefferson Park, the Kentucky Derby, the Illinois and Ohio derbies and the Raceland Derby at Raceland, Ky. After Black Gold's better racing days were over, Hoots, a small-time owner who could not afford to treat his stable lavishly, placed the famous thoroughbred at stud. As a seven-year-old Black Gold returned to the races again—and to the Fair Grounds. Jockey Emery, still an admirer of the sleek black racer, obtained the riding contract. It was in Black Gold's second race after coming out of retirement that the thoroughbred went down with Emery in the saddle. "We went around the turn in front," said Emery. "I hadn't even 'clucked' him. He was going to win as he pleased. Then at the furlong pole he went down. Jumper off quickly and held his leg up. It was limp like. But they took Black Gold behind the paddock and destroyed him." "That horse was the gamest I ever rode. It was all fight with him. There's no telling what Black Gold would have done had he been given the best of care and training facilities. But he was game. The odds were never too great for him to give his best." Among Emery's mementoes is a bit of Black Gold's name. And, he never forgets the annual pilgrimage to the grave. Derby Plant Dresses Up Visitors to Churchill Downs for the running of the Kentucky Derby will find a number of improvements this year. According to Col. Matt Winn, the man behind the Derby, the track has spent $100,000 in alterations designed to accommodate several thousand additional spectators. The clubhouse will have a three-story addition; 150 more mutual machines will be installed; new arteries will relieve traffic jams; parking space is provided for 10,000 more cars and the dining rooms will be enlarged. The Colonel, huh, wants everyone to have a good time; in fact, if it were possible for him to so arrange it—he would see to it that everyone had a little bet on the winning horse.

Borah Stump Tour

from mere curiosity about the fortunes of a public man who has become an American institution. Their direct relation to the present confused Republican situation as a whole is readily apparent. The senator from Idaho is seeking to upset the calculations of the old-line party leaders, and turn the party itself into new paths. Whatever he accomplishes must be largely through his own efforts, for the organization almost everywhere is against him. In that situation, it is hardly too much to say that the course of the Cleveland convention, and consequently the future direction of the Republican party, depend directly on Mr. Borah's willingness and ability to sway the voters by personal appeal. Borah Workers Discouraged His own principal supporters will be among the most eager to learn whether his first efforts on the stump "go over." Without an effective organization, largely without funds or prominent speakers aside from the candidate himself, the workers for Borah have not found the road easy. Some of them have been plainly discouraged, and have said so privately. Their one hope lies in the lingering confidence that Borah the orator may be able to go over the heads of national and state leaders, over the heads of local bosses and precinct committeemen, and persuade the masses of voters. And that confidence is by no means a mere pretense among many who know Mr. Borah's record. Ever since he attracted national attention as a lawyer in a celebrated western labor case more than 40 years ago, he has been recognized universally as one having the rare ability to speak to the "plain people" in language they understand. Always he has been at his best when he stood, as he now stands, in opposition to the established order, and battled against recognized authority. Can he do what another leader of somewhat similar background accomplished in 1920, when Hiram Johnson swept Republican primaries by direct personal appeal in states where he not only had no organization of his own, but was opposed by old-line leaders who thought their entrenchments impregnable? The doubt which has arisen on the score of Borah's earnestness is founded, likewise, on his record. His political reputation for starting things he did not finish is so widely established that at first very few of the recognized leaders thought he meant it when he said he would be a candidate. They had heard talk of his running for president many times before, but nothing came of it. His hesitation about entering Ohio was such that some of his own Ohio leaders openly expressed exasperation. After he spoke in New York some weeks ago he returned to Washington in a frame of mind which his advisers interpreted as reflecting much doubt and discouragement. Now, he has made engagements, however, which indicate a fixed determination to go through with the campaign. If he holds to that determination, the possibilities will come down to the final question of sheer ability to perform the task he has set for himself. In all ordinary matters, Borah remains strikingly active and vigorous for his years. The next few weeks alone can demonstrate, however, whether his old fire on the stump endures and whether, in consequence, he is to be a real power at Cleveland or only one of the numerous casualties of a sanguinary campaign.

Boulder Spillways Get 'Workout'

barracks, mess halls, emergency hospitals, storerooms and work shops where the frontier troops live in the light generated by their own underground power plants. Endless bells carry shells from deep munition dumps to the carefully camouflaged big guns. Anti-aircraft batteries are so situated that French ex-

Hitler's Sneer at British Dominance Angers Native India

CALCUTTA, India—(AP)—Angered by Hitler's recent statement that the "British taught the colored races how to walk, particularly the Indians," nationalist leaders are organizing protest meetings in all parts of India. Retaliation through boycotting German gods has been urged at meetings in Bombay, Lahore and Karachi. Invariably the meetings have ended with resolutions to boycott and with shouts of "Down with Hitler!" Labor organizations in Bombay demonstrated in front of the German consulate with the same cry and the German consul protested in turn to local authorities. Later a statement was issued, credited to the German foreign office, which stated that Hitler's remarks were applicable only to "ancient India." But this was interpreted by the Indian leaders, they have indicated at their meetings, as only adding insult to injury. At a packed mass meeting, held under auspices of the National Students' Council, an organization of Bombay university students, the following resolution was formulated: "In view of the reactionary attitude of Hitlerism towards the world in general and India in particular, India as a protest, should not participate in the Olympic games in Berlin." Because of the influence of the Indian leaders, Germany exports to India may be seriously affected.

ports believe a curtain of lead would force attacking planes to cross the frontier only at tremendous heights. Elaborate ventilating systems make the underground barracks habitable and stores of oxygen wait against the day when steel doors crash shut against gas attacks. Underground storerooms contain enough food and drink for the troops to remain below indefinitely. Soldiers Dislike Posts Behind the Maginot line French engineers have constructed a transport system designed to rush reserves and supplies to the front within a few hours. A network of highways, for heavy military trucks, complement a huge rail system. French troops have no love for life in the underground forts and officers often take less important posts rather than a Maginot line command, but the war ministry has seen to it that France's crack regiments man the fortifications. From Switzerland north to Strasbourg only the Rhine separates the advance posts of the frontier from Germany, but from Strasbourg to Bel-
